

Puzzle 18: Prank Phone Calls

Long gone are the days when adolescent jokesters could make prank phone calls. Caller ID, call screening, call blocking, and all of our modern technologies have pretty much nixed the ability of kids to anonymously call strangers and ask, “this is the power company, is your refrigerator running?”

So, while I have not created a puzzle based on prank phone calls, I have still managed to be fairly devious by creating one that makes you track down public phones around Auburn. Yes, there are still a few out there, and, yes, this is your “run-around” puzzle for the day.

At this webpage (QR code to right):

http://www.ericharshbarger.org/epp/2017/prank\_phone\_calls/

you will find pictures of public phones (or the kiosks where a payphone once stood). Find them, examine them, and decode the numeric message on the stickers I've affixed to them...
